

Matt Glasmann
Mr Borrelli
Coop
Sept 6,2011

Why I would like to be a firefighter

Hello, I am Matt Glasmann and I want to tell you why I know that I can become a fire fighter, and how I could have the guys to put my life in risk to help others out when they are in need for help.

Fire Fighting is a career that at the end of the day you would feel very satisfied with what you accomplished. To have a job as dangerous as this one, you need to be brave, be able to make quick decisions, and work well with others. In order to be a fire fighter you need to be in top shape, physically and mentally. You need to be prepared for anything that comes in your way. Fire fighters are very organized people who know where everything is in case of an emergency when someone is in need of their help. Fire fighters are always there when someone is in need, and that is the type of person I am.

I am always willing to do something for others to make their lives a little easier. I am more of a giving person, then a taker. I am a multi sport person, I play football, baseball, broomball and love to go to the gym on a daily basis and work hard to keep myself in shape. I am always ready as soon as anyone asks me to do something. I consider myself as a fire fighter.

I am a person that could never sit still such as business people sitting in a chair for 6 hours doing nothing but type on a computer. I love to keep myself entertained by working out, talking to others or doing something for someone such as going to help my parents with something or doing something for someone who needs help, and it doesn't have to be relatives. I am an active person.

Fire Fighting is definitely the job for me because they are caring people, active people who are in shape and ready to take on anything that gets in their way, and I am that kind of person!